Our Vision

Founded by husband and wife Douglas and Susie Tompkins in 1966, acquired by Kenneth Klopp two years later and ultimately taken over by the VF Corporation in 2000, The North Face has specialized in technical mountaineering equipment and apparel including sleeping bags, hiking packs, tents, skiwear and high-performance outerwear, as well as performance apparel, footwear and equipment for explorers, climbers and endurance runners (among others).

Voice

We live to place our hands on granite, to savor the frigid dryness of high-altitude air, to feel ice collect on our eyebrows, to stomp a landing in knee-deep powder, or to run mountain trails by the glow of a headlamp. The North Face® speaks in the voice of the core athlete, with insight, confidence, and, where appropriate, humor. We speak truthfully, without arrogance. The voice of the copy should celebrate a passion for exploration, for pushing limits. So we communicate in a voice true to and reverent toward our athletes and their expeditions.
